POWER NETWORKS

Power Networks

The main tenet of modern life support is power. The majority of projects call for distributed electricity, particularly those that are located in regions with variable supply. Defense Support Contracting has provided power solutions on a small to large scale in nations like Iraq, Afghanistan, Sudan, Nigeria, and other remote locations. In addition to constructing HVAC systems in base camps and megawatt generators that can power 100,000 people in distant areas, we have earned a reputation for being experts in power supply.

IT & COMMS

IT & Comms

Poor communication is the root of the majority of problems, which shouldn't be surprising. Poor communication has the potential to quickly end a project. Its early success can be ensured by efficient communication. Building reliable communication is one of the most important factors to take into account when entering remote areas or locations with little to no communication equipment. Work teams need to stay in constant, dependable, and consistent contact with customers, suppliers, employees, governments, and all other stakeholders to complete projects and missions successfully. The IT department at Defense Support Contracting supports straightforward data transfers to VOIP systems with up to 10,000+ users. From the middle of Africa to the center of Iraq, our communications team has successfully erected, installed, and commission countless systems.

The background features a dark blue gradient with several interlocking gears. Safety Will Always Remain Our Number One Priority.

Defense Support Contracting ensures that the necessary provisions are made. The equipment is thoroughly checked before any work is done by the staff, and everyone is instructed to be aware of all potential risks while working shifts. Employees are trained and have the intuition to solve problems if an incident does occur.

At Defense Support Contracting, employee safety is given first attention. We are certain that any concerns that may emerge will be handled safely, professionally, and appropriately because our service is appropriate for all needs.

We Maintain A Clean Project

We at Defense Support Contracting are aware that every project has two phases: building and fabrication and clean up. In light of this, we have an entire team devoted to upholding health and safety regulations, global standards of conduct, and the project area's cleanliness. Any project must include trash management, and we are able to assist even the largest projects from both a builder's and a waste management perspective.

BASE OPS & LIFE SUPPORT

Base OPS & Life Support

People who work in challenging conditions deserve the highest standard of living and employment that their circumstances permit.
